Dear Mr Chairman,

Please find attached my original communication to you. I am still waiting for your response. Much has changed since then. The NHS are prioritising the diagnosis of these children to try and minimise the damage that's been done. The government has had to concede a case brought by the Autistic Society re removal of these children's human rights so their abuse is not against the law. In education staff are educated to help pinpoint the children in need and not aggravate their conditions. The families are having their eyes opened to the extent of the abuse i.e. Bad parents rather than struggling with their child who has not been diagnosed and left to flounder in an abusive and illegal system.

As the Government and Tory central office, who seem to direct the Government's policy and decision making, rather than Parliament, are not responsible for the suffering of all these children, who is?

These are not just issues of legality but constitutional, as democracy has been bypassed.

Please could you explain why you have not responded to my complaints?

Yours sincerely,
