Dear Prime Minister,

I am surprised that you have not responded to my letter, particularly as the subject material covers the abuse of children with special needs. During my case study of Child X I have seen at first-hand how the families are blamed for the short-coming of the Government and that the system is set up so that complaints fail. You and the Cabinet Office have had several years to sort this mess out but have not.

I have explained how Social Services did not comply with the child's tribunal judgement and his placement failed causing more damage to the child. I would like to say that this was a tragedy for just one child, but the evidence shows that it is common-place. By not diagnosing, and labelling instead, tens of thousands have been damaged further through your in-action. This cover-up has been perpetuated over several decades and I have traced it back to the 'short sharp shock' of the Thatcher era.

I expect that from your point of view this is a political minefield that you have not wanted to enter; from the children's experience it is a nightmare from hell affecting all areas of their lives. It has resulted in constant stress affecting their brain function leading to permanent damage and deteriorating brain function throughout their lives.

This abuse of power and cover-up must stop before the next generation go through the same trauma that their predecessors have gone through.

Why have you allowed this abuse to continue? I am still waiting for details of your complaints procedure and all of the paperwork that has been requested, and again I ask why because this is in your Minister's Code. Once again I await your response.

Yours sincerely,

Howard Lamb
