Dear Prime Minister,

Hopefully by now you are up to speed with my case study. Prior to the tribunal the child's life had been miserable. A list of unconnected diagnoses with no back-up or support, let alone a treatment plan. He was placed into a normal school which he could not cope with, and which could not supply support for his special needs. He was repeatedly put at risk leading to a decline in his mental health. The more erratic his behaviour the worse the bullying, mental and physical abuse, and intimidation became; a vicious cycle not of his making.

His family relationship was good yet he would run away from school, abandoning taxis when schools were far from home. The police would be out looking for him, as was his mother, but she always got the blame for her poorly parented child. During this time he was over-medicated and became paranoid that the world was TRYING TO GET HIM! Bullied and restrained at school, then chased by the police – why wouldn't he?! The mother was under threat of a heavy fine for low school attendance, and it was at this point that I came in. I have included 4 additional pieces of correspondence as background information to give you a condensed pre-history. The letters are from myself to the Solicitor, MP, Tribunal, and Regulator, and were accepted by the tribunal and not contested.

As all of the requested paperwork came back it became clear that the Council and its agents had exacerbated the situation through not wanting to diagnose and treat the child, but to blame him instead. Once I had fully diagnosed the child the paperwork became farcical because they were doing the exact opposite to how he should have been treated, and further damaging the child.

I hope this is helpful to you.

Yours sincerely,

Howard Lamb
