Dear Prime Minister,

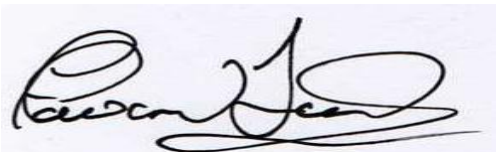

I had hoped to have heard back from you by now, especially as the children are still being abused by the system. By now you know this with certainty after internal investigation. Yet rather than get to the heart of the matter you would prefer to tinker around the edges (educate teachers and speed up some diagnoses).

You did not corrupt the system, that happened under new Labour. However, you have known and not acted on the mother's behalf to receive the justice she so rightly deserves; as do all the other mothers who have been wrongfully blamed for the damage your system did to their children.

I am on a week of R & R next week, my second week off in 20 months as a primary health care clinician. However, if anyone would like to talk to me about this whole situation, I will certainly find the time.

I am still waiting for a correct response.

Yours sincerely,

Howard Lamb
