Dear Prime Minister,

I received a letter from the department of Education regarding my complaints over non-diagnosis leading to abuse of the young in your government's care. They have not got a remit for independent investigation or the power to question you, Mr Case, Mr Johnson or Mrs May regarding the non-compliance of the complaints procedure or deflecting and deferring the uncomfortable fact that autistic children and others are abused by a system that cannot cope with the numbers and does not seem to care how much they are damaged.

Your decision not to have an independent investigation and to cover up my complaints means that nothing will change and that more children will be unnecessarily harmed. If you do not diagnose autism, they will need expensive care and one-to-one support. How is this possible that saving reputation and money is more important than changing the system for the better? We need to stop traumatising children with special needs.

A correct prompt response would be helpful to clear this matter up so that there would be no need to present it to Europe.

Yours sincerely,

Howard Lamb
