Dear Prime Minister,

I have written a series of letters to recent Prime Ministers from Mrs May to you regarding the deplorable way that children with special needs have not been diagnosed to save money. If you have not received them, even though they were all sent by special delivery, please let me know and I will re-send them.

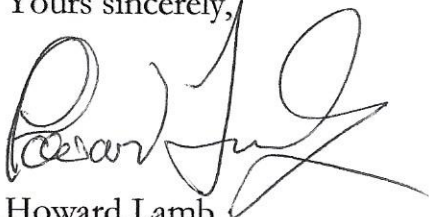

You and your staff have ignored protocols and procedures from not fulfilling complaints procedures to sending paperwork. In addition, there have been breaches of transparency; disability and equality laws; and the Minister's Code as well as criminal law as highlighted in my previous letter.

As a whistleblower, after first hand observation of the abuse of Child X, I have been ignored – another breach of law. How is any of this possible if you are not responsible for the damage done to these children with special needs and have tried to cover it up – this is definitely not the honourable or legal thing to do.

If you are unwilling to fulfil your obligation to your honour code we are moving from democracy and the rule of law to a government which is self-serving and not protecting the people, illegally. You seem to feel that you have no accountability and can just tough it out like the bloods scandal and others.

Please let me know if you feel that your actions are not against your code and who is responsible for the damage done to children which will affect them all for the rest of their adult lives.

Yours sincerely,

Howard Lamb
