Dear Prime Minister,

Please read the series of letters attached regarding the abuse of children through wrong and non-diagnosis to save money for the government.

Nobody is above the law, yet previous prime ministers and the cabinet office have breached many. These range from not sending the requested paperwork at the low end to covering up child abuse at the other. Your office has not been transparent, aided and abetted the abuse of SEND children, then continued to cover it up (criminal offences). I had hoped a change in leadership, to a man of the people, would alter the government's attitude but I have seen no evidence that this is the case.

Non-diagnosis has meant multiple thousands of neurodivergent children have been forced through a system designed for the normal, damaging them along the way. Many leave education with no qualification and their conditions complicated by being in a state of fright and flight for years causing them to feel isolated, depressed, their conditions complicated further and unemployable. The money saved from the education budget will cost far more in benefits long term; that is without the personal trauma they have experienced, that many will never recover from. Restraint and mental abuse are the norm until they are excluded or sectioned, and that is often just the start of their trauma, ending with them on the streets, in prison, or suicidal.

This has only been possible because the system has been twisted against them, complaints get nowhere as I have seen, even to the point where a council's agent has falsified evidence to an educational tribunal, which was well documented. People must be held responsible otherwise the system will not change.

These children are humans not statistics on an accountant's ledger. The cost to rectify the system will save money from benefits in time and a huge amount of trauma to probably hundreds of thousands of children who become adults and do not thrive or pay tax.

Parliament has overseen a corrupted system for decades, yet no one has been held accountable. In fact, it is virtually impossible for accountability to happen. If I had been responsible for a fraction of what the corrupted system has done to these children, I would have been jailed.

No one is above the law, so how is it possible that parliament seems exempt, just covering up and kicking the can down the road, sucking more kids in every year and damaging them unnecessarily. This is clearly what happens when the system is too big to fail and has! There has to be consequences for parliament's actions otherwise we slip out of democracy and into a government-controlled state.

I look forwards to your quick and full response as to why no actions have been taken after knowing what was/has been done to these children over decades. You and your staff must know as it's impossible that the system twisted itself after all.

Yours sincerely

Howard Lamb
